“The young people told me in rehearsal that they could not master the Arab 7-beat rhythm of one of the pieces. I said, ‘Don’t think too much!’ and after 30 minutes of improvisation they were playing it. It was beautiful.”

“I was embarrassed at first,” related 19 year-old violist Ella Bukszpan, “especially in front of my fellow Arab musicians. But I saw that they were accepting that I did not know and they did not judge me. We learn from each other and we play well with each other.”
